DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 16-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cromwell US 6,084,178, in view of Verdiell US 6,252,726.

Cromwell discloses a method of forming an assembly to a PCB (15) including a heatsink (1) having a base plate portion and a plurality of fins (2), a component (3) having at least one lead, and at least one support block (13), including connecting the component to the heatsink, interposing the support block between the heatsink and the PCB, and connecting the heatsink to the PCB, wherein a portion of a connection force connecting the heatsink to the PCB is transferred through the support block to couple the lead of the component to a pad of the PCB, also support connects to the heatsink, and the assembly may be temporary (see figs. 1-3 and related text).

Cromwell does not disclose that the component is a laser diode or that an optic cable is connected to the laser diode to receive an optical signal from the laser diode.

Verdiell discloses forming an assembly for a laser diode (255) and an optic cable (280).

Art Unit: 2822

Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use the laser diode and optic cable of Verdiell in the assembly of Cromwell, because it allows for the easy replacement of a component should it become defective.
